Since version 132.0.5905.102 (tested with Windows versions), there is not hint at the bottom showing the url when hovering over an link in a second Opera Window.

The developer version (134.0.5945.0) has this issue as well.

Version 132.0.5905.73 and earlier worked OK.

Still not fixed.

(<https://forums.opera.com/uid/5564>): Hello, can you check if this is depending on the display resolution/scaling? I cannot reproduce it so it can be some edge case. Please write what OS you have and if it happens for all themes.

@Opera-QA-Team (<https://forums.opera.com/uid/1000682>) The particular bug is important comparing vs the features recent changes and long playing bugs but reproduce it easily here on Win 10 (according to the bug reporter's link response on Win 11).

Restore the 2nd click for the 'scroll to top' feature and restore the 'create search engine' option for search fields

<https://forums.opera.com/post/404101>
(<https://forums.opera.com/post/404101>)

Restore the option to delete unnecessary themes in EasySetup.

'force dark page' toggle still doesn't remember its state (most probably because of the toggle in Settings vs toggle in EasySetup are not synchronised) .

@opera-qa-team (<https://forums.opera.com/uid/1000682>): I have Windows 11 Home. I checked a few and I perform on: Aurora, Obsidian, Sonic. In all the dark ones it seems. Probably occurs in the blinds. This "crosshair" is white, so maybe it is simply difficult to see on light motifs. I set the theme Classic white to blue with blue stripes and I don't see the effect. So maybe there are dark motives after all.

I will also add that you need to hover the cursor over the Opera Menu several times to make it visible. If you want, I can record a video and show the Opera version, check different themes, etc.

My proposals for changes in Opera (Google Document).

It seems that along with other chromium based browsers Opera's MV2 extension will be lost starting from 151 version. Looks like all the workarounds flags will be Especially sensitive to uBlock support.

Environment: Ubuntu LTS (Snap version). Note: Works perfectly on OpenSUSE.

Issues:

Critical Bug: Right-clicking anywhere in the browser causes Opera to completely freeze and become unresponsive.

Missing Feature: The old menu that allowed users to easily view and restore recently closed tabs is missing. I expect this functionality to be brought back.

A miracle happened with this bug!

It looks like you finally solved the problem by setting a fixed window size in 133.0.5932.60.

I can't believe it.
But why didn't you describe this in the changelog?
