We strive to transform lives. For more than 150 years, our core purpose is enduring. For more than 150 years, we've been right for patients and for society. We know that changing lives requires us to do things differently. We start by listening to and addressing what really matters to patients, the people who love them, and those in the healthcare system who provide care. And that's what inspires us all to be bold, push boundaries and set new standards that open up greater opportunities. Read our community guidelines: <https://takeda.info/communityguidelines>

While we continue to foster education on VWD, it's equally important to encourage self-advocacy. That's why we handed out advocacy journals – a practical tool to help patients track every bleed and have more informed conversations with their physicians. Every bleed matters, and together, we can continue to educate on bleeding disorders like VWD because patients deserve answers and a path forward to a brighter future.
