The program policies below apply to Drive, Docs, Sheets, Slides, Forms, Vids, and new Sites. These policies play an important role to maintain a positive experience for everyone that uses Google products.

We need to curb abuses that threaten our ability to provide these services, and we ask that everyone abide by the policies below to help us achieve this goal. We may review content for violations of these policies and take action. This review includes access restriction of content, removal of content, and limitation or termination of a user's access to Google products. Any restrictions pursuant to these policies apply globally unless noted otherwise, and content restrictions will remain in place unless successfully appealed.

When these policies apply, Google may make exceptions based on artistic, educational, documentary, or scientific considerations, or where there are other substantial benefits to the public to not take action on the content.

Google may take action on accounts that go above storage quota limits. For example, we may reject new uploads, compress content that exists, or delete content if you exceed your storage quota or fail to obtain sufficient additional storage. Read more about storage quotas here .

Be sure to check back from time to time, as these policies may change. You can refer to Google's Terms of Service for more information.

Report Abuse

If you believe that someone is violating the policies found below, report abuse .

Reports don't guarantee removal of the file or any other action on Google's part. Content that you disagree with or deem inappropriate isn't always a violation of Google's Terms of Service or program policies. After you submit the report, Google may contact you to learn more about the report's content.

To report copyright infringement or other legal issues, please use this tool , which will guide you through the process of reporting content that you believe warrants removal from Google's services based on applicable laws.
